

REGULATIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY FOR HISTORY DIDACTICS.

I. MEMBERSHIP AND AIMS

Par. 1

1. The INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY FOR HISTORY DIDACTICS is a professional association of those concerned with the initial and in-service training of history teachers.
2. The Society's purpose is to advance the study of history didactics as a scholarly discipline by means of the mutual exchange of bibliographical information, research findings, ideas about the subject, teaching materials, syllabuses and any other relevant information.

Par. 2

The aims of the Society will be accomplished principally by means of projects. Such projects can be:

- (a) conferences with various objectives; some might be organised on a regional basis;
- (b) the publication of communications and contributions to a scholarly periodical which offers space to the Society;
- (c) the publication of an international bibliography of publications, curricula and teaching materials;
- (d) the publication of an International Handbook for History Didactics;
- (e) international exchanges particularly amongst the younger generation of those involved in the training of history teachers;
- (f) the negotiation of international collaboration between the institutions of participating countries, including the exchange and joint development of teaching projects;
- (g) the establishment of a centre for documentation;
- (h) co-operation in the development of national and regional groups for the study of history didactics;
- (i) stimulation of and support for research projects concerned with history didactics.

Par. 3

1. In order to realise its aims, the SOCIETY seeks to collaborate with academic institutions. It will strive to secure the necessary resources for the implementation of its projects, and it hopes to enlist the aid of its members in framing proposals for financial support.
2. It seeks co-operation with professional associations, with international institutions of learning and with relevant government departments in improving research and the initial and in-service training of teachers in all sectors of higher education, while also advancing history teaching in schools and the historical education of the general public.
3. The Society is ready to co-operate with all persons and institutions pursuing the same aims, particularly in the fields of research into historical, geographical and political education.

Par. 4

The Board shall decide upon the admission of new members. Any candidate for membership whose application is rejected by the Board may appeal to the General Assembly.

II. ORGANISATION

Par. 5

The Society's institutions shall be the General Assembly and the Board.

Par. 6

1. The General Assembly shall decide upon the cost of subscriptions and upon matters concerned with the regulations. It shall also discharge the old Board and elect the new Board from which the President and Vice-President of the Society are drawn.
2. The Board shall convene the General Assembly every two or three years preferably in conjunction with an important academic conference.
3. The General Assembly shall be competent to pass resolutions if 25% of the members are present. Additionally, postal votes, addressed to the President, are permissible.
4. A two-third majority of all its members shall be required for the dissolution of the Society. Members who are unable to attend the General Assembly may submit a postal vote.

Par. 7

1. The Board shall consist of seven members. No nation may occupy the majority of places on the Board.
2. The General Assembly shall elect the Board members after a period of no more than four years. Re-election is permissible.
3. The General Assembly shall elect from among the members of the Board, the President, who is responsible for the Society's external relations, and the Vice-President, who supports the President and deputizes for him/her as necessary.

Par. 8

The Society shall be based in the same town in which the President is employed.

Agreed in Tutzing.
